Welcome to the Writers Newsletter

Jolene's eBooks and More and Webs and Blogs For Writers gathers informative articles from our various websites that we have created over the years that you might find informative and helpful to both readers and writers.

Book Cover Designs

The cover design for your book is extremely important for your future sales. You have experienced it yourself when you are browsing books in the library, looking for books online or even in the old-fashioned bookstore as they usually arrange their books by how they look to catch your eye and to encourage purchases. Colors draw us or repel us and the pictures on the front may draw us in to at least read the synopsis.

Finding Time to Write

Finding time to write may be one of the hardest things new writers may encounter. There are so many things in our lives that may interfere when we try to write from having to go to our regular jobs to family and friends needing our attention. Making time or scheduling regular writing times will help you get your writing done. In the long run, it may even help your creative juices to flow.

A Word About Self-Publishing

Help with self-publishing your very own eBook on Amazon Kindle, found another FREE Self-Publishing company called Smashwords and CreateSpace for paperbacks. If you have not elected the Kindle Select program or have passed your 90 days promotion period you might want to consider using this service as well. They have a worldwide distribution network and agreements with some of the top book retailers such as Barnes and Noble and Apple.

Whats Your Favorite National Week Observance

We are back to our favorite website again looking for interesting topics to talk about. We decided to pick the National Observance Week ones this month. Below is a listing from their website that we thought you might enjoy knowing about this second week in February. Yes, we all know that Valentine's Day is this week and most of you are worried about getting your special someone what they would consider a romantic gift but since I am not currently in a

The Blanche - A History

I have created a website prior to publishing our book about the history of a 100-year-old building in Lake City, Florida that is currently being renovated about being pretty much empty for about 15 years. I am documenting my research as I go and hope to garner interest for the book through my posts and personal video interviews with former customers, employees and businesses that were in the Blanche Hotel building. It is a fine old building that has a rich history that deserves to be told.

Workamping in Florida

We have also created a "Members Only" website that will be a companion site to our Volunteering in Florida series of books we will be writing over the summer. Creating websites just for your book or series books and linking them to your author website can be a great way to advertise and create a loyal following. That way you can separate your different series and post articles just for that crowd. Of course, you will want to link to each other. Please read more on our new website.
