ANOTHER GREAT AUTHOR REMEMBERED

Sandra West Prowell was a mystery writer who published 3 books in the 1980s about her female detective named Phoebe Siegel set in Montana where the author was born and raised. Sadly, she only published three books in the series.

Even though she never published more books prior to her passing she does deserved to be remembered. Check out her fansite I created several years ago:

Phoebe Siegel is a cop turned private detective with too much past, too much family, and a talent for diving too deep into a case.

NEW FICTION PEN NAME

If you have not heard yet, Jolene, has chosen a pen name to begin writing and publishing steampunk mystery fictions. That's right she is turning her years of research on the old Blanche Hotel into a series about two Victorian women traveling on a steam train solving crimes.

If you would like to come along on the adventure she is publishing them first in Kindle Vella <https://amzn.to/3ZShOzo>

Please - Like, Share and Comment - the first three chapters are FREE to read.
